

GDRock Data Retention Table

Insert into your privacy policy · Update dates as needed · v2.0 · 2026

This table documents the personal data your organisation processes, the legal basis, retention period, and deletion trigger for each category. Keep this document updated whenever your data practices change.

Core Retention Schedule

Data Category	Purpose of Processing	Lawful Basis	Retention Period	Deletion Trigger
Customer account details	Website functionality, login, purchases	Contract	3 years after last log-in	Account deletion request or inactivity
Order & invoice records	Tax & accounting proof, dispute resolution	Legal obligation (FR/DE/UK)	10 years from end of financial year	Statutory limit reached
Payment transaction logs	Fraud prevention & legal proof	Legitimate interests	5 years from transaction date	Chargeback period expires
Email marketing consent	Send promotional newsletters	Consent	Until consent withdrawn or 180 days	User unsubscribe or explicit withdrawal
Customer support tickets	Resolve disputes & improve service	Legitimate interests	2 years after ticket closed	Automated ticket purge
Server access & IP logs	Security, intrusion detection	Legitimate interests	90 days from collection	Log rotation cycle
Cookie consent records	Demonstrate consent compliance	Legal obligation	3 years from consent date	Consent record auto-deletion
Website analytics data	Improve user experience (aggregated)	Consent	14 months (Google Analytics default)	Analytics platform auto-deletion
Job applicant data	Recruitment process	Legitimate interests / Contract	6 months after rejection	HR system scheduled deletion
CCTV footage (if applicable)	Security and premises protection	Legitimate interests	30 days from recording	Automated overwrite cycle

Lawful Bases Quick Reference (GDPR Art. 6)

Basis	When to use it	Key point
Contract (Art. 6(1)(b))	Processing necessary to fulfil a contract with the data subject	Cannot be used where processing is objectively necessary
Legal obligation (Art. 6(1)(c))	Processing required by EU or member-state law	The legal obligation must be clearly identifiable
Legitimate interests (Art. 6(1)(f))	Your legitimate business interests that don't override the individual's rights	Requires a Legitimate Interests Assessment (LIA); document the assessment
Consent (Art. 6(1)(a))	Freely given, specific, informed, unambiguous indication of wishes	Must be as easy to withdraw as to give; keep consent records
Vital interests (Art. 6(1)(d))	To protect someone's life in an emergency	Rare — only use where no other basis is available
Public task (Art. 6(1)(e))	Public authorities carrying out official functions	Generally not applicable to commercial businesses

Important Notes

- Once the retention period expires, data must be permanently deleted or anonymised.
- Anonymised data (from which no individual can be identified) falls outside GDPR scope.
- If a data subject exercises their right to erasure, delete their data sooner unless a legal obligation requires you to keep it (e.g. tax records).
- Review this table at least annually and whenever you adopt a new data processing activity.
- Keep a version history of this document for audit purposes.
- For questions: support@gdrock.com